PLANES MADE SPEED OF NINETY MILES AN HOUR

LEAVE HERE 10:15, ARRIVE KNOXVILLE AT 11:39.

Will Probably Be Back in Chattanooga Before Dark Tonight.

The squadron of airplanes that arrived in the city Wednesday afternoon from Memphis, mapping out an air mail route, left this morning at 10:15 o'clock for Knoxville. It is thought that the planes will return to this city late this afternoon if the weather permits. Early this morning a crowd gathered around the three machines to examine and ask questions of the visiting aviators. The machines are manned by Lieuts. J. S. Marriott, O. G. Bacon and R. E. Gay and Sergeant Phil J. Morey, Harrikan and Shuman. The aviators arrived in the city Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock and were to leave Thursday morning for Knoxville but on account of the weather they put off their trip until this morning. The three airplanes arrived in Knoxville this morning at 11:39, making the trip of 110 miles in less than one hour and a half. The route taken by the aviators was by Athens and Lenoir City. The direct air route is much less the mileage by railroad. The planes passed Athens at 10:59, Lenoir City at 11:23, and arrived at the Country Club at Knoxville at 11:39. The distance from Athens to Knoxville is sixty miles, and this distance was covered in forty minutes, which is an average of ninety miles an hour, which is about the speed the type of planes used generally make.
